A VERY SEVERE FALL

But the Victim seems to have Escaped Serious Injury.

A DRUNKEN MAN'S FUNNY NOTION.

He goes to Sleep on a High Wall.

Lieutenant Gaus and Lieutenant Terrill, of the city police force, were called up on the national road, on the hill, yesterday on a peculiar errand. They went believing they would find a dead man lying around somewhere, but none was found. Mr. Freimuth, the barber, drove over the hill about 1 o'clock yesterday morning, and he saw a man lying on top of the stone retaining wall apparently asleep. He called to him, thinking he was in a dangerous place, but could not rouse him, and passed on. When he returned at 5 a. m. the man's hat was lying on the wall, and beside it was a bag containing two pieces of meat, a cocoanut and a gum coat.

Freimuth brought these things to police headquarters. As the wall was nearly twenty feet high on the outer side and the bank rocky and precipitous below, he had no doubt the man had fallen off and been killed.

The officers searched the place and found marks of the man's fall, and his tracks where he had clambered back around the bank, but no floor or fragments of torn clothing. Later they heard a drunken man went out the pike in his bare head early in the morning.

The man's escape was scarcely short of miraculous. A sober man would certainly have been killed. He can get his property at police headquarters.

A BAD CUTTING SCRAPE.

Charles Whiteside Hacked up Dangerously Yesterday Morning.

At an early hour yesterday morning, while Frank Fonner, Charles Whiteside, William Burwinkle and a Miss Jackson were standing at the corner of Twenty-ninth and Chapline streets, they got into a quarrel, and Fonner drew a knife and slashed Whiteside terribly on both sides of the face, cutting from the right temple to the jaw and making a deep and long gash on the left cheek. He also cut two long slashes, meeting so as to form a V, on Whiteside's breast. Not satisfied with this he slashed at the other two, but they escaped. Officers O'Brien and Moran found Fonner a little later at Jackson's boarding house, and locked him up. Yesterday Squire Phillips sent him to jail. Whiteside's wounds are very serious, if not dangerous. Drs. Ridgway and Manley sewed them up.

A Missing Boy.

Saturday morning just after breakfast John Hines, a twelve-year-old boy, left the home of his parents at 1716 Chapline street, and up to a late hour last evening nothing had been seen or heard of him. The police were notified, and their assistance in finding him solicited.

Willie Atkinson, an Island boy who was taken to the Pruntytown reform school by Captain McNichol twenty months ago as an incorrigible, came home Saturday. It is thought he is thoroughly reformed. He speaks highly of the treatment of the boys there.

Cases for the Police Court.

Yesterday E. F. Liffingwell, who does business on the upper market square, was arrested, charged with kicking in the door of Mrs. Dittie's house of ill fame yesterday morning.

The house of May Williams was raided by the police early yesterday morning, and she, one girl and three men arrested.

Several plain drunks are on the docket for this morning's court.

Gave Himself up.

Yesterday George Stumpf, the man who cut Ed Kunkle's throat in a fight in a boat house in the Eighth ward two weeks ago, was sent to jail by Squire Arkle. The police have been looking for him ever since the crime was committed, but he eluded them till Saturday night, when he met Officer Devlin on the street and gave himself up. Kunkle is about well.

He got a Hatchet.

Saturday night John Mack went to the home of his wife's relatives to see one of them, and while there his brother-in-law, John Wolf, and he got into a quarrel, and Mack got a hatchet and went for Wolf. No serious harm was done. Mack was locked up and a warrant issued for Wolf.

THE ELECTRIC LIGHTS.

The Currents Turned on for the First Time Saturday.

The question is asked, every day, When will the electric lights be shining? Delay after delay has occurred, but it now looks as if another week would see the whole system brilliant.

On Saturday afternoon the current was turned into the wires for the first time, the North Wheeling circuit, known as circuit No. 1, being giving a daylight test. The wire worked all right, and every lamp was inspected by Superintendent Capps and found to be in first-class shape. Possibly all the lamps may be tested one night this week. All have been hung but those in the Eighth ward. The testing in the building has been completed, and the temporary testing frame torn away. The different circuits will be tested one at a time in daylight.

SUP'T. HARRINGTON QUIT.

Because, though no longer Free to act According to his Best Judgment, the Superintendent still Bears the Responsibility.

On the evening of Friday, April 15, Mr. W. E. Harrington, superintendent of the Citizens' and the Wheeling street railway lines, reinstated seven employees of the shop department, whom he had discharged the Tuesday before. On Saturday morning Mr. Harrington handed the following communication to Mr. John M. Sweeney, the president of one of the roads:

WHEELING, W. VA., April 16, 1892.

To the Board of Directors of the Citizens' and Wheeling Railway Companies.

GENTLEMEN:—As instructed by you to settle the matter of the discharge and the reinstatement of the seven shop employees so that the street car employees would not strike, I met the working committee of the union, and the only arrangement that could be effected to avoid a strike was to accede to their demands and reinstate all the men in their old positions, which I did. Feeling that the position of superintendent is no longer one of freedom of action, yet with all the responsibility still present, I hereby respectfully tender my resignation.

Yours, very respectfully,
W. E. HARRINGTON.

"On the twenty-ninth day of January," Mr. Harrington said to an INTERVIEWER reporter who called on him, "I prepared a communication to the board of directors, urging the completion of the new barn and shops. In this paper—which, by the way, I was unable to present to the board until the latter part of February, no meeting of the board having been held in the interim—I said that with the new barns and shops in operation, I would be able to effect a saving of about $1,000 in the wages paid to the barn and shop force alone."

"Last Monday evening at a meeting of the board of directors, I told the members that I was now prepared to effect in part the reduction in wages of the shop force, as promised by me in my January report, and that in the morning I would discharge seven men out of the twenty-one. They were, of course, glad to hear that I expected to effect a saving. The next morning I notified seven employees that their services would be no longer required. I then employed two machinists, and also a shop foreman, the latter a man with whom I was not acquainted, but who came to me very highly recommended as a machinist and general repair man. I anticipated no trouble. Here was the situation: I had discharged seven men, who were very good men for the work required of them in the old barn, but who, in my judgment, were not specially suited to the nature of the work to be done at the new barns and shops. Having discharged them, I had hired three other men, thus effecting at once a reduction in wages of about $80 a week, or $3,120 a year."

"I found, that same day, that there would be trouble, and I saw and talked with six individual members of the boards of directors of the two companies. Each and all said they would stand by me; the reduction effected a saving, and I was presumed to know whether the men under me were capable of doing the work required of them, or not. Thursday evening the board was to meet the committee of the union. There was, however, no quorum of the directors. On Friday evening there was more than a quorum of both boards, and I had a talk with them. They told me they would leave the matter in my hands to settle, but that by all means a strike must be avoided. They would not have a strike, they said. Then the directors left the office and I conferred with the committee of the union and the men whom I had discharged. The latter would accept no positions on the cars as conductors or operators, but insisted that I should reinstate them, even if the discharge of the other three men I had hired became necessary. I had been ordered to avoid a strike, and I told the men they could go back to work Monday morning. The next day I handed in my resignation."

"Thus you have the whole story in a nutshell. Without doing injustice to myself I could not do otherwise than resign the superintendency. Under the circumstances, I feel that my further incumbency of the position would be a farce, and that were I to remain I would be a fit and proper subject for ridicule."

In speaking of the charges that had at one time been made that he was filling up the different departments of the road with Atlantic City men and others with whom he was acquainted, Mr. Harrington said that of the twenty-one employees whom he had on the barn and shop force only three were old acquaintances; the other eighteen were men he had never met before he came to Wheeling. Of the employees in other departments, his brother, the chief line-man, had been with him for six years; the chief dispatcher has also worked under him for a long time, and the chief engineer at the power house was another man in whom he had full confidence. In fact, the latter had reduced one-half the monthly bills for coal used at the power house.

Messrs. C. J. Harrington, chief line-man; Joseph E. Kearney, chief engineer, and C. E. Starr, chief car dispatcher, who came here with Mr. Harrington, handed in their resignations shortly after they had ascertained that Mr. Harrington had resigned.
